Faith Politics And Reconciliation Catholicism And The Politics Of Indigenelty:

Faith, Politics and Reconciliation Dominic O'Sullivan, 2005 Dominic OSullivan takes us on a theological philosophical and political journey from the countries of Europe to the colonies of Australia and New Zealand Religious Change and Indigenous Peoples Helena Onnudottir, Adam Possamai, 2016-04-08 Exploring religious and spiritual changes which have been taking place among Indigenous populations in Australia and New Zealand this book focuses on important changes in religious affiliation in census data over the last 15 years Drawing on both local social and political debates while contextualising the discussion in wider global debates about changing religious identities especially the growth of Islam the authors present a critical analysis of the persistent images and discourses on Aboriginal religions and spirituality This book takes a comparative approach to other Indigenous and minority groups to explore contemporary changes in religious affiliation which have raised questions about resistance to modernity challenges to the nation state and or rejection of Christianity or Islam Helena Onnudottir Adam Possamai and Bryan Turner offer a critical analysis to on going public political and sociological debates about religious conversion especially to Islam and changing religious affiliations including an increase in the number of people who claim no religion among Indigenous populations This book also offers a major contribution to the growing debate about conversion to Islam among Australian Aborigines Maoris and Pacific peoples

Injustice, Memory and Faith in Human Rights Kalliopi Chainoglou, Barry Collins, Michael Phillips, John Strawson, 2017-07-20 This multi disciplinary collection interrogates the role of human rights in addressing past injustices The volume draws on legal scholars political scientists anthropologists and political philosophers grappling with the weight of the memory of historical injustices arising from conflicts in Europe the Middle East and Australasia It examines the role of human rights as legal doctrine rhetoric and policy as developed by states international organizations regional groups and non governmental bodies The authors question whether faith in human rights is justified as balm to heal past injustice or whether such faith nourishes both victimhood and self justification These issues are explored through three discrete sections moments of memory and injustice addressing injustice and questions of faith In each of these sections authors address the manner in which memory of past conflicts and injustice haunt our contemporary understanding of human rights The volume questions whether the expectation that human rights law can deal with past injustice has undermined the development of an emancipatory politics of human rights for our current world A Theology of Land Christopher Gerard Sexton, 2019-07-01 On the face of things the spirituality of Australia s Aborigines is hard to reconcile with a spirituality of Christian theology with its human centrism apt to a Son of God in Man made flesh in Jesus Christ Nevertheless this author Christopher Sexton a Sydney based lawyer drew on his deep Catholic theological beliefs and intense dialogue with Aboriginal elders to find a surprisingly common ground and in abundance The creation stories of each lay emphasis on humanity s stewardship for the search and its mystical riches Here is a book by a Christian lawyer who consulted widely and deeply with our First People s

He found more in common between our distinct spiritualities than might be expected Proving once again that listening deeply to each other will often yield common ground

Sharing the Sovereign: Indigenous Peoples, Recognition, Treaties and the State Dominic O'Sullivan,2020-12-21

This book explains how recognition theory contributes to non colonial and enduring political relationships between Indigenous nations and the state It refers to Indigenous Australian arguments for a Voice to Parliament and treaties to show what recognition may mean for practical politics and policy making It considers critiques of recognition theory by Canadian First Nations scholars who make strong arguments for its assimilationist effect but shows that ultimately recognition is a theory and practice of transformative potential requiring fundamentally different ways of thinking about citizenship and sovereignty This book draws extensively on New Zealand s Treaty of Waitangi and measures to support Maori political participation to show what treaties and a Voice to Parliament could mean in practical terms It responds to liberal democratic objections to show how institutionalised means of indigenous participation may in fact make democracy work better

'We Are All Here to Stay' Dominic O'Sullivan,2020-09-21 In 2007 144 UN member states voted to adopt a Declaration on the Rights of Indigenous Peoples Australia Canada New Zealand and the US were the only members to vote against it Each eventually changed its position This book explains why and examines what the Declaration could mean for sovereignty citizenship and democracy in liberal societies such as these It takes Canadian Chief Justice Lamer s remark that we are all here to stay to mean that indigenous peoples are here to stay as indigenous The book examines indigenous and state critiques of the Declaration but argues that ultimately it is an instrument of significant transformative potential showing how state sovereignty need not be a power that is exercised over and above indigenous peoples Nor is it reasonably a power that displaces indigenous nations authority over their own affairs The Declaration shows how and why and this book argues that in doing so it supports more inclusive ways of thinking about how citizenship and democracy may work better The book draws on the Declaration to imagine what non colonial political relationships could look like in liberal societies
