Gardening Florence J Martin,2021-01-12 A garden is a planned space usually outdoors set aside for the display cultivation or enjoyment of plants and other forms of nature The garden can incorporate both natural and man made materials The most common form today is a residential garden but the term garden has traditionally been a more general one Zoos which display wild animals in simulated natural habitats were formerly called zoological gardens Western gardens are almost universally based on plants with garden often signifying a shortened form of botanical garden Some traditional types of eastern gardens such as Zen gardens use plants sparsely or not at all Gardens may exhibit structural enhancements including statuary follies pergolas trellises stumperies dry creek beds and water features such as fountains ponds with or without fish waterfalls or creeks Some gardens are for ornamental purposes only while some gardens also produce food crops sometimes in separate areas or sometimes intermixed with the ornamental plants Food producing gardens are distinguished from farms by their smaller scale more labor intensive methods and their purpose enjoyment of a hobby or self sustenance rather than producing for sale Flower gardens combine plants of different heights colors textures and fragrances to create interest and delight the senses Western gardening had its origins in Egypt some 4 000 years ago As the style spread it was changed and adapted to different localities and climates but its essentials remained those of disciplined lines and groupings of plants usually in walled enclosures Gardening was introduced into Europe through the expansion of Roman rule and second by way of the spread of Islam into Spain Though clear evidence is lacking it is presumed that Roman villas outside the confines of Italy contained native and imported plants hedges fruit trees and vines in addition to herbs for medicinal and culinary purposes In medieval times the monasteries were the main repositories of gardening knowledge and the important herbal lore Though little is certainly known about the design and content of the monastic garden it probably consisted of a walled courtyard built around a well or an arbor with color provided by flowers some of which including roses and lilies served as ecclesiastical symbols all of which maintained the ancient idea of the garden as a place of contemplation
