

Plutarch Fall Of the Roman Republic

7 pages | 1529 words

The Roman Republic began after the overthrow of the last king in 509 BCE. Rome thrived without their Kings as the Senate took control. The Republic expanded to cover all of Italy, Greece, parts of France and Africa, the Iberian Peninsula, and more. The powers and responsibilities of the former Roman monarchs were essentially divided between two consuls, an elected office with the power of veto over each other. Approaching the end of the Republic, Rome was already the major power of the region. So how did the Republic fail and fall? Was it Julius Caesars fault? Pompey? Octavian? No, the Republic met its demise due to the greed, fear, and gross incompetence of the wealthy senators. The mythical origins of Rome are tied to the fall of the city of Troy. Aeneas, born of the prince Anchises and the goddess Venus, a Trojan prince, escapes the devastation of Troy with his father, son, and a group of others. (Virgil) Among his descendants would be the twins Romulus and Remus. Ordered to death as infants by the king and abandoned, the children would survive by nursing from a she-wolf until they were eventually found and adopted. As they grew older they decided to found their own city. A disagreement between them on where this first city should be started resulted in the death of Remus, and Romulus would go on to found the city of Rome and become its first king. Roman history can be divided into three distinct periods. The Roman Kingdom, the Roman Republic, and the Roman Empire. While there are little in the way of writings from the time that survive, the origin kingdom is believed to date back to 753 BCE. Most of what is known from the time come from later Roman historians in the Republic era. During the time of the Roman Kingdom, as the name suggests, they had kings who ruled over the people. Unlike many kingdoms of the time however, the king was not considered to be a god, he was a "representative of the people." (Mommsen, 15) The king's job was enforcing the laws, and any deviation from those laws required the permission of an "assembly of the people and a council of elders." (Mommsen, 15) It was this council of elders that was the original Senate, and the assembly of people were all those citizens who were not senators. The Senate was comprised of the heads of wealthy Roman families. Numbering 300 and appointed by the king these senators served for life. While the king possessed the power to appoint a senator, the Senate had the power to elect a new king when the old one died. They also had the power to accept or veto any legal changes or breaks from the constitution that their monarch may have suggested. Declaring war also required the senate's permission. In a very real way, they were the "guardians of the constitution" (Mommsen, 19), a responsibility that they would still hold dear hundreds of years into the future. Tarquin, the last king of the Roman Kingdom, was overthrown, in large part...

Fomenko,2013-04-17 We present certain empirico statistical methods for the analysis of narrative and numerical data extracted from different texts of historical character such as chronicles or annals They are based on several statistical principles worked out by the author and originally reported at the Third International Vilnius Conference on Probability Theory and Mathematical Statistics in 1981. The principal results were published in the papers 15 32 293 299 304 319 and in the book A T Fomenko Methods for Statistical Analysis of Narrative Texts and Applications to Chronology Moscow Univ Press Moscow 1990 in Russian. See also Part 1. The methods are applied to the problem of correct dating of the events in ancient and medieval history. These results induce conjectures on the redating of some important ancient historical events. Generally speaking, we might say that the commonly accepted Modern Text book of ancient and medieval European Mediterranean Egyptian and Middle Eastern history is a fibered layered chronicle obtained by gluing together four nearly identical copies of a shorter original chronicle. The other three chronicles are obtained from the original chronicle by redating and renaming the events described in them: we rigidly move the original chronicle in its entirety backwards in time by approximately 333 1053 and 1778 years. Thus the full Modern Textbook can be reconstructed from its smaller part, namely from the original chronicle for the 9 17th cc A D.
