Family Fortunes Men And Women Of The English Middle Class 1780-1850:

Keeping Family in an Age of Long Distance Trade, Imperial Expansion, and Exile, 1550-1850 Heather Dalton, 2025-10-01
Keeping Family in an Age of Long Distance Trade Imperial Expansion and Exile 1550 1850 brings together eleven original essays by an international group of scholars each investigating how family or the idea of family was maintained or reinvented when husbands wives children apprentices servants or slaves separated or faced separation from their household The result is a fresh and geographically wide ranging discussion about the nature of family and its intersection with travel over three hundred years a period during which roles and relationships within and between households were increasingly affected by trade settlement and empire building The imperial project may have influenced different regions in different ways at different times yet as this collection reveals families especially those transcending national ties and traditional boundaries were central to its progress Together these essays bring new understandings of the foundations of our interconnected world and of the people who contributed to it
