

Every problem regarding environment and pollution can be solved. Science is always working on new solutions, new suggestions for alternative means of production are frequently put on the table. The most difficult issue in this scenario is the interest of different social groups in the world society.

The vision of profit gains must be aligned with environmental protective measures which is really challenging. First positive changes begin with this alignment, for example, hotels proposing to clients to use the same bath towel while they stay in. It is good for nature, and it is good for the business men.

For all other matters, conciliating both aspects is not a simple task, more difficult than the most high tech science. Efforts for environmental purposes should focus on changing culture, values, business perspectives of profits in global society, otherwise there will be not enough progress.
