Evidence Based Policy A Practical Guide To Doing It Better:

Evidence-Based Policy Nancy Cartwright, Jeremy Hardie, 2012-09-27 Over the last twenty or so years it has become standard to require policymakers to base their recommendations on evidence That is now uncontroversial to the point of triviality of course policy should be based on the facts But are the methods that policy makers rely on to gather and analyse evidence the right ones This book explains that the dominant methods which are in use now broadly speaking methods that imitate standard practices in medicine like randomised control trials do not work They fail because they do not enhance our ability to predict if policies will be effective

Weaponising Evidence Margherita Melillo, 2024-02 Analyses the history of the international law on tobacco control from the negotiation of the WHO FCTC to the WTO

Science in Negotiation Jessica Espey, 2022-11-28 This book explores the role of scientific evidence within United Nations UN deliberation by examining the negotiation of the Sustainable Development Goals SDGs endorsed by Member States in 2015 Using the SDGs as a case study this book addresses a key gap in our understanding of the role of evidence in contemporary international policy making It is structured around three overarching questions 1 how does scientific evidence influence multilateral policy development within the UN General Assembly 2 how did evidence shape the goals and targets that constitute the SDGs and 3 how did institutional arrangements and non state actor engagements mediate the evidence to policy process in the development of the SDGs The ultimate intention is to tease out lessons on global policy making and to understand the influence of different evidence inputs and institutional factors in shaping outcomes To understand the value afforded to scientific evidence within multilateral deliberation a conceptual framework is provided drawing upon literature from policy studies and political science including recent theories of evidence informed policy making and new institutionalism It posits that the success or failure of evidence informing global political processes rests upon the representation and access of scientific stakeholders levels of community organisation the framing and presentation of evidence and time including the duration over which evidence and key conceptual ideas are presented Cutting across the discussion is the fundamental question of whose evidence counts and how expertise is defined The framework is tested with specific reference to three themes that were prominent during the SDG negotiation process public health articulated in SDG 3 urban sustainability articulated in SDG 11 and data and information systems which were a cross cutting theme of the dialogue Within each scientific communities had specific demands and through an exploration of key literature including evidence inputs and UN documentation as well as through key informant interviews the translation of these scientific ideas into policy priorities is uncovered The intended audiences of this book include academic practitioners studying evidence to policy processes multilateral negotiation and or UN policy planning The book also intends to provide useful insights for policy makers including UN diplomats officials and staff working to improve the quality of evidence communication and uptake within multilateral institutions Finally it aims to support the whole global academic and scientific community including students of public policy and political science by providing insights on how to input into influence and even shape international evidence informed policy making

Scientific Advice, Risk and Evidence Based Policy Making Great Britain. Parliament. House of Commons. Science and Technology Committee, 2006 This report presents the Committee s findings on the operation of the scientific advisory system as a whole It builds on the case studies covered in three previous reports on MRI safety the illegal drugs classification and ID card technologies The Committee recommends that the role of Government Chief Scientific Adviser GCSA be split from that of Head of the Office of Science and Innovation to enable full attention to be given to the GCSA s cross departmental functions The GCSA would be better placed in a department such as the Cabinet Office which has cross departmental responsibilities The establishment of departmental CSAs is welcomed but more needs to be done to ensure they maximize their contribution to strategic decision making and policy development within departments The report also recommends the establishment of a Government Scientific Service to enhance scientific support in the civil service and calls for greater involvement of learned societies and professional bodies in the advisory system The Committee wants greater public investment in research to underpin evidence based policy making with the establishment of a cross departmental fund to commission independent research The short term nature of the political cycle should be counterbalanced by embedding horizon scanning into the policy making process Transparency in policy making has improved but more could be done Valuable work on risk should be continued and responsible coverage of risk by the media should be encouraged by greater involvement of departmental CSAs and greater clarity and consistency in public communication
