ETHICAL ISSUES AND GUIDELINES

ETHICAL GUIDELINES

Standards of conduct or rules set out by the British Psychological Society (BPS). Their aim is to help guide the behaviour of professionals.

The main ethical issues that need to be considered are:

- (1) Deception
- (2) Informed Consent (lack of)
- (3) Protection from harm (lack of)

ETHICAL ISSUES

DEALING WITH ETHICAL ISSUES

DEBRIEFING

Revealing the true nature of the research once the participant has taken part – offer participants to option of withdrawing their data once they know the true aims of the research.

This strategy could help overcome the ethical issues of:

- (1) Lack of Protection of Participants
- (2) Lack of Consent

RETROSPECTIVE CONSENT

Participants give consent for their data to be used after they have participated in a piece of research.

This strategy could help overcome the ethical issues of:

- (1) Lack of Consent
- This type of consent can help to overcome the threat of demand characteristics

PRIOR GENERAL CONSENT

Asking participants to give consent for all potential research, once this has been obtained, the participant has technically given consent to take part in any piece of research.

This strategy could help overcome the ethical issues of:

- (1) Lack of Consent

PRESUMPTIVE CONSENT

Asking a group that are representative of your participants whether they would give their consent to take part in a study. Carrying this consent over to a group of 'matching' participants.

This strategy could help overcome the ethical issues of:

- (1) Lack of Consent

CONFIDENTIALITY

Ensuring that participants are not able to be identified. This would involve using code names for case studies, passwords that only participants are aware of when completing questionnaires etc...

This strategy could help overcome the ethical issues of:

- (1) Lack of Confidentiality

RIGHT TO WITHDRAW

Ensuring that participants are informed (and reminded) about their right to withdraw themselves and/or their data from the research at any time.

This strategy could help overcome the ethical issues of:

- (1) Lack of Protection of Participants
