Jack, Andreas Roepstorff, 2003 Introspective evidence is still treated with great suspicion in cognitive science This work is designed to encourage cognitive scientists to take more account of the subject s unique perspective Individual Differences in Sensory and Consumer Science Tormod Næs, Paula Varela, Ingunn Berget, 2018-02-21 Individual Differences in Sensory and Consumer Science Experimentation Analysis and Interpretation presents easily readable state of the art coverage on how to plan and execute experiments that give rise to individual differences also providing the framework for successful analysis and interpretation of results The book highlights the different methodologies that can be applied and how to select the correct methodology based on the type of study you are performing be it product research and development quality control or consumer acceptance studies Written by an experienced team of statisticians and sensory and consumer scientists the book provides both academics and industry professionals with the first complete overview of a topic of ever increasing importance Identifies how to plan and execute experiments in sensory and consumer science Analyzes and interprets individual variances in sensory and consumer research Differentiates best practices for examining product development quality control and consumer acceptance Flavour in Food Andree Voilley, Patrick Etiévant, 2006-03-08 The first part of the book reviews the way flavour is detected and measured The first two chapters discuss our understanding of how humans perceive and then process information about taste compounds Chapter three reviews current practice in the sensory analysis of food flavour Chapter four discusses choosing from the wide range of instrumental techniques which have been developed to identify aroma compounds The final chapter in Part One discusses the complex issues in matching instrumental measurements with the results of sensory evaluation of foods Part two reviews key research in the way flavour compounds are retained within foods and the factors determining the way they are released There are chapters on flavour compound interactions with lipids emulsions protein and carbohydrate components in food Other chapters review modelling aroma interactions in food matrices and mechanisms of flavour retention in and release from liquid food products The final part reviews what we now know about how humans experience flavour release together with some of the key factors influencing this process There are chapters on the process of flavour release in the mouth the way texture aroma and odour taste interactions influence this process psychological factors and the development of flavour perception during infancy Flavour in food seeks to distil key developments in flavour science and summarise their implications for the food industry It is a valuable reference for R D staff those responsible for sensory evaluation of foods and product development as well as academics and students involved in flavour science Understand how flavour is detected and measured Analyses key research in the retention and release of flavour compounds Examines how humans experience flavour release Philosophical Transactions ,2006 Each issue of Transactions B is devoted to a specific area of the biological sciences including clinical science All papers are peer reviewed and edited to the highest standards Published on the 29th of each month Transactions B is essential reading for all biologists

The Relationship Between Single Nucleotide Polymorphisms in Taste Receptor Genes, Taste Perception and Dietary Intake Elie Chamoun,2018 Food preferences and dietary habits are heavily influenced by taste perception and there is growing interest in characterizing taste preferences based on genetic variation Genetic differences in the ability to perceive key tastes may impact eating patterns Therefore increased understanding of taste genetics may lead to new personalized strategies which may influence the trajectory of chronic disease risk Recent advances show that single nucleotide polymorphisms SNPs in taste receptor genes are associated with changes in psychophysical measures of taste as well as eating patterns The current understanding of how genetic variation impacts taste function and dietary habits for sweet fat salt sour and umami taste is limited and warranted due to the role of these types of taste in detecting nutrients that pose health risks when overconsumed Results from this thesis demonstrated that specific SNPs are associated with taste sensitivity taste preference and eating patterns In adults associations between SNPs and psychophysical measures of taste were observed between rs4790151 TRPV1 and salt sensitivity rs2499729 GRM4 and umami sensitivity rs713598 TAS2R38 and bitter sensitivity and rs236514 KCNJ2 and sour preference In children associations were observed between rs4790522 TRPV1 and salt preference and rs173135 KCNJ2 and sour preference The rs9701796 TAS1R2 sweet taste receptor SNP was significantly associated with both sweet preference and dietary intake of added sugar in children while calories from sugar in snacks among children were associated with the rs35874116 TAS1R2 sweet taste receptor SNP Work from this thesis also demonstrates that higher sensitivities to salt sweet and umami taste are associated with decreases in the preferences for these tastes Overall SNPs in taste receptor genes have been demonstrated in this thesis to associate with psychophysical measures of taste and in some instances affect food preferences and eating patterns This emerging and active field of taste research shows great promise to enhance our fundamental understanding of how taste receptor SNPs contribute to the genetic basis of eating patterns health and disease Results from this thesis provide important new insights into the relationship between SNPs in taste receptor genes taste perception and dietary intake in both children and adults Major Steps in Cell Evolution Royal Society (Great Britain). taste receptor genotype were determined The hypertensive group had a higher salt taste recognition threshold than the normotensive group However there was no correlation between salt taste recognition threshold and salty food preference Results also provide evidence that the polymorphism TRPV1 rs4790522 with AA genotype is associated with a lower sensitivity threshold of salt taste
