Genius Denied the Life and Death of Max Ewing Max Ewing, Wallace K. Ewing, 2012-09-24 Maxwell Anderson Ewing was the subject of whispered family conversation since at least 1934 and probably earlier Usually his accomplishments as a pianist composer novelist poet sculptor and photographer were overshadowed by his homosexuality and his unlikely friendship with a prize fighter named Jack Pollock Max's suicide in 1934 just after celebrating his 31st birthday adds drama and sadness to this remarkable man's mostly happy but short life In his brief life span Max mingled with dozens of artists authors composers musicians politicians stage and movie stars and wealthy families in Europe New York and Hollywood and he left at least a small mark on the literary and musical scenes in America His only published novel Going Somewhere can be read today with the same quiet amusement and recognition of society's foibles as it was 80 years ago Max's artistic skills blossomed when he was still a young man but a series of tragedies snipped the flower before it could fully mature First came the death of his father John Caleb Ewing at the age of 65 Two years later in 1934 his mother Clara Barto Ewing became mentally and emotionally unstable and soon she passed on Congruent with both these losses was the Great Depression which caused financial difficulties for the family aggravated Clara's decline cut short the sales of Max's novel and created a job shortage for almost everyone in the country including Max Like the protagonist in a Greek drama he seemed immobilized by this series of events unable to recover from the shocks too stunned to act At the same time he was eerily aware of his lethargy Ironically Max spent the last few months of his life in his small hometown of Pioneer Ohio the community he saw as provincial meddling and stifling On June 16 1934 two months after his mother's death he drowned by walking into the Susquehanna River in Binghamton New York Max's best moments and his worst moments and much in between are clearly revealed in his letters written primarily between 1926 and 1934 Few of the letters are dated although many of them include the day of the week in which they were written and in a very few cases the envelopes with postmarks have survived Where necessary I used content to determine at least an approximate date of origin Jack Pollock's letters to Max were especially difficult to place in chronological order Almost all of Max's letters and many of Jack's contain references to people and places that may be unfamiliar to today's readers A list of these references with a line or two of biographical data or explanatory material is located in Appendix B Unfortunately no information was uncovered regarding a few of the people and they remain merely names

The senses in interior design John Potvin, Marie-Ève Marchand, Benoit Beaulieu, 2023-09-05 The senses in interior design examines how sight touch smell hearing and taste have been mobilised within various forms of interiors The chapters explore how the body navigates and negotiates the realities of designed interiors and challenge the traditional focus on star designers or ideal interiors that have left sensorial agency at the margins of design history From the sensually gendered role of the fireplace in late sixteenth century Italy to the synaesthetic d cors of Comte Robert de Montesquiou and the sensorial stimuli of Aesop stores each chapter brings a new perspective on the central role that the senses have played in
