Geographical Targeting For Poverty Alleviation Methodology And Applications Regional And Sectoral Studies:

Geographical Targeting for Poverty Alleviation David Bigman, Hippolyte Fofack, 2000-01-01 In many developing countries there are large differences in economic conditions and the standard of living between regions and even between communities within the same region In many countries poverty has a clear geographic dimension since the poor are often concentrated in pockets of poverty Therefore the design of poverty alleviation policies must also have a significant spatial component Although development projects are carefully designed and meticulously evaluated for cost effectiveness and benefits too many of them are not sufficiently targeted geographically The growing availability and use of spatial data organized in a computer system such as a geographical information system GIS makes it more feasible to analyze the impact of projects in specific locales and to achieve more effective targeting Geographical Targeting for Poverty Alleviation introduces the basic concepts of a GIS It also demonstrates how to organize geographic and nongeographic data In addition it presents different methods for using the data of the Household Income and Expenditure Survey together with other surveys and the population census to provide estimates for the standard of living and the incidence of poverty incidence in different geographical areas of a country Ultimately these estimates should be used to establish guidelines for targeting poverty alleviation projects This publication illustrates different GIS applications for identifying the project s target population determining the project s spatial sphere of influence or deciding where to locate public facilities This publication is of interest to task managers economists development researchers and geographers

The Application of a Spatial Regression Model to the Analysis and Mapping of Poverty Alessandra Petrucci, Nicola Salvati, Chiara

Seghieri, 2003-01-01 Poverty mapping in developing countries is used to identify ways to improve living standards and until now methods have been generally based on econometric models which do not take into account the spatial dependence that may exist in human societies with regard to income distribution This report uses spatial regression techniques to model more accurately the distribution of poverty across regions in Ecuador

Remote Sensing from Space Bhupendra Jasani, Martino Pesaresi, Stefan Schneiderbauer, Gunter Zeug, 2009-09-17 David Stevens Space based information which includes earth observation data is increasingly becoming an integral part of our lives We have been relying for decades on data obtained from meteorological satellites for updates on the weather and to monitor weather related natural disasters such as hurricanes We now count on our personal satellite based navigation systems to guide us to the nearest Starbucks Coffee and use web based applications such as Google Earth and Microsoft Virtual Earth to study the area of places we will or would like to visit At the same time satellite based technologies have experienced impressive growth in recent years with an increase in the number of available sensors an increase in spatial temporal and spectral resolutions an increase in the availability of radar satellites such as Terrasar X and ALOS and the launching of specific constellations such as the Disaster Monitoring Constellation DMC COSMO SkyMed Constellation of small Satellites for the Mediterranean basin Observation and RapidEye

Even more recent are the initiatives being set up to ensure that space based information is being accessed and used by decision makers such as Sentinel Asia for the Asia and Pacific region and SERVIR for the Latin America and Caribbean region , Dynamics of Income Inequality and Welfare in Latvia in the Late 1990s Hippolyte Fofack,Célestin Monga,2004

Development Domains for Ethiopia: Capturing the Geographical Context of Smallholder Development Options Jordan Chamberlin, John Pender, and Bingxin Yu, Beyond Market Liberalization Bart Minten,Manfred Zeller,2017-11-01 This title was first published in 2000 Most African countries experienced dramatic agricultural market reforms over the 1990s This has resulted in significant changes in the operation of the agricultural markets and consequently in income generation and welfare of rural households In the case of Madagascar the results suggest that market reforms and corresponding adjustments in rural markets have had an average positive effect on food security for the rural households However richer households seemed to have benefited more than the poorer households This text provides a study of the market reforms focusing particularly in the changes brought to welfare income and environmental sustainability in rural areas The study aims to be of particular interest to economists and those involved in development and environmental issues Poverty Alleviation Policies and Strategies ,2003

Emerging Financial Markets in the Global Economy Larry Sawers,Daniel M. Schydlowsky,David Nickerson,2000 This collection of papers considers many of the important issues raised by these dramatic changes in emerging financial markets including the nature of this systemic risk and how governments can go about reducing it how to increase the supply of capital that can be invested in development aspects of foreign direct investment informal credit markets the impact of informal finance on development how lessons learned from microfinance in developing countries can be applied to credit markets in the United States and how to create institutions that can effectively deal with the problems inherent in lending to poor people in developing countries The book is intended for policy makers and scholars interested in capital markets in developing and transition economies It is also suitable for use as a supplementary text in upper level undergraduate courses on development finance Annual Report International Service for National Agricultural Research,2000 World Bank Research Program World Bank,2002
