Universe

The most popular argument regarding the origin of the universe is the Big Bang Theory also called expanding universe hypothesis.

The Big Bang Theory considers the following stages in the development of the universe.

- In the beginning, all matter forming the universe existed in one place in the form of a "tiny ball" (singular atom) with an unimaginably small volume, infinite temperature and infinite density.
- At the Big Bang the "tiny ball" exploded violently. This led to a huge expansion. It is now generally accepted that the event of big bang took place 13.7 billion years before the present. The expansion continues even to the present day.
- As it grew, some energy was converted into matter. There was particularly rapid expansion within fractions of a second after the bang. Thereafter, the expansion has slowed down. Within first three minutes from the Big Bang event, the first atom began to form.
- Within 300,000 years from the Big Bang, temperature dropped to 4,500K (Kelvin) and gave rise to atomic matter. The universe became transparent.
- The expansion of universe means increase in space between the galaxies.

An alternative to this was Hoyle's concept of steady state. It considered the universe to be roughly the same at any point of time.

- However, with greater evidence becoming available about the expanding universe, scientific community at present favours argument of expanding universe.

Formation of Galaxies and Stars

- The distribution of matter and energy was not even in the early universe.
- These initial density differences gave rise to differences in gravitational forces and it caused the matter to get drawn together. These formed the bases for development of galaxies. A galaxy contains a large number of stars.
- A galaxy starts to form by accumulation of hydrogen gas in the form of a very large cloud called nebula.
- Eventually, growing nebula develops localised clumps of gas. These clumps continue to grow into even denser gaseous bodies, giving rise to formation of stars.
- The formation of stars is believed to have taken place some 5-6 billion years ago.
