Flourishing as a Dialectical Balance Tim Lomas,2016 Positive psychology an emergent branch of scholarship concerned with wellbeing and flourishing initially defined itself by a focus on positive emotions and qualities However critics soon pointed out that this binary logic classifying phenomena as either positive or negative and valorising the former while disparaging the latter could be problematic For example apparently positive qualities can be harmful to wellbeing in certain circumstances while ostensibly dysphoric emotional states may on occasion promote flourishing Responding to these criticisms over recent years a more nuanced second wave of positive psychology has been developing in which wellbeing is recognized as involving a dialectical balance of light and dark aspects of life This article introduces this emergent second wave arguing that it is characterized by four dialectical principles First the principle of appraisal states that it is difficult to categorically identify phenomena as either positive or negative since such appraisals are fundamentally contextually dependent Second the principle of co valence holds that many states and qualities at the heart of flourishing such as love are actually a complex blend of light and dark elements Third the principle of complementarity posits that not only are such phenomena co valenced but that their dichotomous elements are in fact co creating two intertwined sides of the same coin Finally the principle of evolution allows us to understand second wave positive psychology as itself being an example of a dialectical process This article is published as part of a collection entitled On balance lifestyle mental health and wellbeing
