EcoCommerce 101 Tim Gieseke, 2011 In his book EcoCommerce 101 Timothy Gieseke envisions the next Green Revolution supporting both economic and ecological worlds To do so the market must generate signals that demand ecoservices such as clean water air and habitat along with the demand for food fiber and bio fuels As governments and non profit organizations struggle with defining sustainability EcoCommerce 101 recognizes that as economic participants you and I always have and always will define sustainability Using agriculture as the prime example he employs actual and visionary examples of how an ecoservice market signal and an invisible hand can assure that our planet will provide for all of our needs in the next millennium EcoCommerce principles applied to retailing or water services could mean the emergence of a truly green global economy one which would be based on investing in ecosystem management and restoration In reading EcoCommerce 101 you will discover the Economy is actually a subset of the Ecology not the other way around Natural Capital of nature is as valuable to the economy as our man made factories engaging in EcoCommerce will be as natural as engaging in our economic system new career opportunities will about when this New Economics is unlocked the second Green Revolution will be more than just about food production and how Sustainability will be defined by consumers society industries government non profits and retailers in a unified manner Shared Governance for Sustainable Working

Schor,2013-12-03 The world has changed dramatically We no longer live in a world relatively empty of humans and their artifacts We now live in the Anthropocene era in a full world where humans are dramatically altering our ecological life support system Our traditional economic concepts and models were developed in an empty world If we are to create sustainable prosperity if we seek improved human well being and social equity while significantly reducing environmental risks and ecological scarcities we are going to need a new vision of the economy and its relationship to the rest of the world that is better adapted to the new conditions we face We are going to need an economics that respects planetary boundaries that recognizes the dependence of human well being on social relations and fairness and that recognizes that the ultimate goal is real sustainable human well being not merely growth of material consumption This new economics recognizes that the economy is embedded in a society and culture that are themselves embedded in an ecological life support system and that the economy cannot grow forever on this finite planet In this report we discuss the need to focus more directly on the goal of sustainable human well being rather than merely GDP growth This includes protecting and restoring nature achieving social and intergenerational fairness including poverty alleviation stabilizing population and recognizing the significant nonmarket contributions to human well being from natural and social capital To do this we need to develop better measures of progress that go well beyond GDP and begin to measure human well being and its sustainability more directly
