M. Gregersen, Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, 1995-01-01 In recent years issues related to forests have come to prominence on the international agenda This reflects growing concern over the fate of forest ecosystems and possible loss of the benefits which they provide In the process of moving towards sustainable management of forests there is growing demand for practical methodologies for full valuation of forests which permit the contributions of forests to be presented more clearly and in a manner which decision makers can readily appreciate Appropriate techniques should be able to adequately capture forest values in terms of the environmental social and production functions and to recognise the worth of both marketed and non marketed goods and services This publication reviews approaches which can overcome the limitations of conventional analysis and provides a reference framework to help clarify what approaches to forest valuation can or cannot work The publication is not itself a manual on valuation techniques but by reviewing the various approaches makes it possible to select appropriate methodologies for which it then refers readers to other publications which can provide how to do details The Economic Appraisal of Environmental Projects and Policies J. visions of climate change that are projected in the media often involve extreme weather events disasters and mass migration of poor people This book takes a critical look at this notion drawing on research in Bangladesh a country located at the heart of debates on climate change and migration This book argues that rather than leading to dramatic events climatic and environmental impacts often cause incremental changes in people s habitats and livelihoods making them migrate in search of better places and income With or without climate change climatic and environmental factors can impoverish people and drive displacement and migration especially in the global South These influences including disasters need not necessarily make people move but instead sometimes trap the poorest and the most vulnerable people in their places exposed to hazards or make them migrate to even riskier places such as crowded and flood prone urban slums This book argues that restrictions placed on people s mobility options could increase their vulnerability and favours proactive migration policies This timely contribution explains the climate hazard migration nexus in an accessible engaging language for students of geography development studies politics and environmental studies as well as humanitarian and development practitioners and policymakers Environmental Policy Barry C. Field,2007 Nations throughout the world are struggling to limit and manage environmental damages stemming from economic production and consumption In virtually every country collective action in the form of public policy has been undertaken to rein in these impacts This text provides an authoritative overview of the dynamic process through which governments make decisions on environmental matters In clear reader friendly language Field introduces students to the rudiments of the public policy process the participants and their roles and the content of the major federal environmental statutes regarding air water and land pollution Throughout the discussion Field explores the evolving role of the federal government in U S environmental policy He also highlights important ongoing policy issues both domestic and international that will confront policy makers well into the future Back cover Caribbean Ecology and Economics Norman Girvan,1991 Global Ecology and Biogeography Letters ,1996
