The Journal of Education, 1908 The Annual Report of Her Majesty's Chief Inspector of Education, Children's Services and Skills 2007/08 Great Britain. Office for Standards in Education, 2008-11 With the establishment on 1 April 2007 of the Office for Standards in Education Children's Services and Skills Ofsted's responsibilities for inspecting children's services changed substantially with Ofsted now regulating and inspecting childcare children's social care and provision for learners of all ages This report covers the first full year of reporting on the organisation's new remit The first section presents an evaluation of the quality and standards in care early education schools colleges adult learning and skills and children's services. It is based on evidence from more than 45 000 inspections and regulatory visits in 2007/08. The second section draws on Ofsted's thematic inspections and surveys in the different areas of its remit. This section evaluates the effectiveness with which providers seek to address three important matters: improving the life chances of the least advantaged members of society through excellence in provision; safeguarding children and young people from neglect, abuse and other forms of harm; and enabling learners to acquire the skills they need to succeed in their working lives. The Chief Inspector is encouraged by the recognition that much is going well for so many children, young people and adult learners, but frustrated that there is still too much that is patently inadequate and too many settings and institutions where the rate of improvement is unacceptably slow. Macmillan's Magazine, 1881. Education and Care Away from Home Moira Borland, 1998. This literature review brings together evidence from British research, policy and practice regarding how children and young people in public care fare within the education system. The review suggests that many of the barriers to educational progress lie in the social work and education systems and their interaction and argues that increased understanding by professionals of each other's perspectives and active collaboration at all levels is vital. Key topics considered in the review include: 1. the characteristics and circumstances of children in care; 2. the evidence that they underachieve at school; 3. ways in which the care and education systems impact on children's educational experience; 4. specialist education and residential schools; and 5. collaboration between departments of social work and education, including examples of special initiatives or services. The review's final chapter summarizes key points and identifies some of the main factors that may promote or impede progress. Gaps in current knowledge and understanding are also highlighted. Contains approximately 250 references. EV. Appletons' Journal, 1881.
