Disability and Inequality A. Gayle-Geddes, 2016-04-30 Disability and Inequality Socioeconomic Imperatives and Public Policy in Jamaica explores the lived experiences of persons with disabilities PWDs in Jamaica examining measurable socioeconomic deficits that establish PWDs are more likely to experience inferior education training and labor market outcomes compared to persons without disabilities The author provides an evidence based theoretically grounded and implementable public policy framework called Framework of Key Determinants for Political and Socioeconomic Inclusion of PWDs which advances anti discrimination legislation and a twin track policy schema with interconnected enablers of human rights Using this framework Jamaica the Caribbean and other Southern countries looking for methods and strategies to fulfill commitments set out by the United Nations Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities will find approaches to sustain existing progress and address structural systemic deficits which continue to deny PWDs long term sustainable development

Childhood Disability, Advocacy, and Inclusion in the Caribbean Beth Harry, 2019-10-04 This book presents an ethnographic case study of the personal motivations advocacy and activation of social capital needed to create and sustain the Immortelle Children s Centre a private school that has served children with disabilities in Trinidad Tobago for four decades Based on narratives by parents from the 1980 s current parents teachers community advocates and the author who was the founder of Immortelle in 1978 the study views the school within the context of a nation standing in a liminal space between developed and developing societies It argues that the attainment of equity for children with disabilities will require an agenda that includes a legal mandate for education of all children increased public funding for education health and therapeutic services and an on going public awareness campaign Relating this study to the global debate on inclusion the author shows how the implementation of this agenda would have to be adapted to the social cultural and economic realities of the society

Embodied Inequalities in Disability and Development Hisayo Katsui ,Virpi Mesiäislehto ,2022-04-08 This book highlights the embodied knowledge of persons with disabilities as a vital resource for understanding equality without taking disability and development for granted The perspective of embodied inequality offers alternative ways to comprehend our normality as until now the notion of normality has too frequently excluded persons with disabilities and their perspectives Disability inclusion has never been as important as it is today in the development discourse yet systematic discrimination against people due to their disabilities persists To address this the link between theories and practices is strengthened in this book Through using different contexts in the different book chapters the readers are informed of how profoundly inequalities are embedded in our society and pronounced as embodied experiences of persons with disabilities The chapters are written not only by academics but also by disability activists and NGO representatives The chapters focus on disabilities and development as embodied inequalities manifested at different levels including theory law and policy and practice In conclusion the book presents 6 A s as lessons learned from decolonial understanding and conceptions of Rural Jamaica Ronnie Linda Leavitt,1992 Although negative conditions exist it appears that disabled children are not particularly stigmatized at the household level Nevertheless societal stigmatization and apathy do exist As a result disabled children are not being prepared to fully integrate into Jamaican society 2 There is a range of variation of beliefs and behaviors with regard to disability and rehabilitation The concept of intracultural diversity is supported 3 This population has adapted their cultural belief systems and actual behaviors to match their material realities That is it would appear that people who have a disability and their caretakers have demonstrated contextual accommodation 4 Community based rehabilitation programs based on the primary health care and community participation principles enumerated by the WHO are theoretically sound and practically attainable in Jamaica

Cultural Inclusion Floyd Morris,2022-03-07 The objective of Cultural Inclusion is to demonstrate that persons with disabilities have made and continue to make vital contributions to Jamaican culture The central argument therefore that persons with disabilities have made a vital contribution to Jamaican culture fills a critical gap in disability studies ethnomusicology and other scholarly research programmes A solid piece of work that represents a major scholarly achievement Cultural Inclusion should be a starting point for other researchers to look at areas from the entertainment industry where persons with disabilities have made significant contributions Importantly also this pioneering work will provide real data and research analysis for policy makers and decision makers at both the public and private level Cultural Inclusion will appeal to a diverse audience as it provides short and lively biographies both known and less well known Jamaican musicians

Media and Disability Culture in Jamaica Marion J Myrie,2021-08-31 When persons with disabilities appear in the media the reason is quite often to showcase disability Many Jamaican producers would acknowledge that they have never considered including disabled persons in any part of their productions While broadcasters are very conscious in ensuring a mix of gender and race on screen and on air there is less effort made toward ensuring that these programmes adequately reflect the society as a whole This phenomenon is particularly worrying when the role of the media is chiefly to educate inform and provide entertainment to the masses Maxwell 2000 McQuail states that it has continuing significance in contemporary society in the economic cultural social and political spheres McQuail 2010 He goes on to further say that everyday social life lifestyles and conversations are influenced by the contents of mass media because of the fact that the individual spends much time interacting with media McQuail 2010 Persons with disabilities PWD which constitute some 15% of the general population The World Health Organization 2011 are underrepresented in mainstream media news television shows movies and current events in Jamaica When PWD do appear in the media their portrayal is stigmatized and stereotypical Disability is an evolving concept according to the Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities CRPD and it emphasizes that disability results from the interaction between persons with impairments and attitudinal and environmental barriers that hinder their full and effective participation in society on an equal basis with others United Nations 2014 Looking at disability as an interaction means that disability is not an attribute of the person and that improved social participation of the disabled can be made possible by addressing the barriers which hinder them in their everyday life The World Health Organization 2011 This is important as we must acknowledge that media depiction of disability influences the way PWD are treated in society and thus the way they live their lives If Jamaica as a whole is to reach the Vision 2030 goal of creating a country that is the place of choice to live work raise families and do business we need to address the way we treat persons who are otherwise able If Jamaica succeeds it will be a model of a truly inclusive country that respects the humanity of all Key Words Disability Mass Media Inclusion Disability Culture

Economic Equality Road Map for Persons with Disabilities ,2011 Education and Development Canute S.

Thompson,2020-07-07 Canute S Thompson examines the nexus between the place and scope of the educational enterprise of a country and a country s developmental prospects and experience His central claim is that the sustainable development of a country is a function of the quality of its education system and the levels to which its citizens are educated He argues that in this calculus the quality of post secondary and tertiary education systems is a determinant of a country s prospects for development In examining the issue of underdevelopment facing the Caribbean Thompson explains that institutions of higher learning in the region face the imperative of finding ways of becoming both more accessible and more relevant to the developmental needs of the region Taking account of the provisions of the General Agreement on Trades in Services he points to the disadvantages this trading arrangement poses for higher education institutions in small developing states and suggests ways in which the vulnerabilities these institutions face may be addressed While asserting that higher education institutions including and especially the University of the West Indies must find ways to remain viable in a highly competitive marketplace Thompson argues that governments of the region have a duty to ensure the survival and success of these institutions In this vein he advances recommendations for the public funding of access to higher education Thompson also examines impediments to development such as crime the decline in social activism weak institutional processes and leadership and public mistrust and explores their connection to education He concludes that the path to sustainable regional development is dependent on improving the quality of and access to education and that such improvements will in turn help contain crime inspire social activism strengthen institutional processes and leadership and ultimately restore public trust

Local Strategies in a Global Network Joan A. Tucker,2007 ABSTRACT The declaration of the International Year of Disabled Persons in 1981 and the international activism of persons with disabilities resulted in the globalization of disability which involved a new framework for the treatment of PWDs Although disability activism was being played out globally it has been about PWDs gaining equality and full participation in their local societies Therefore at the heart of an international movement was the strategic organization of PWDs most of who live in the developing world This dissertation is based on a case study of activism for disability rights in one particular developing society Jamaica The Jamaican movement is spearheaded by the Combined Disabilities Association CDA which has been at the forefront of disability rights activism locally and regionally The primary research question how does CDA organize strategically to meet the needs of the broader disabled population of Jamaica is broken down into the following four sub questions 1 how is disability constructed in the context of Jamaican culture 2 how did CDA members negotiate their original involvement and level of participation with the organization 3 what is the nature of the linkage between the CDA and Disabled People International and how does this relationship affect CDA s policies and procedures and 4 what strategies does CDA employ to mobilize PWDs in Jamaica to participate in advocacy activities These questions are explored using participant observation semi structured interviews survey and document review Findings reveal a complex construction of disability as Jamaicans negotiate between various beliefs and ideas to understand the meaning of disability Furthermore the negotiation of movement involvement by PWDs is based their connections have with fellow members as well as the personal benefits that they receive Although the CDA has been influenced by the international disability movement it has also contributed to the global activism especially in the Caribbean In a local environment overwhelmed by limited financial resources and social inequalities the CDA by default addresses some social welfare of PWDS while pursuing its primary commitment to advocacy resulting in numerous challenges
