Department Chair Succeeds in providing accessible and useful resources to individuals across different leadership roles As a midpoint between textbook and reference work it is successful at both and provides a clear and unbiased background to issues facing current leaders Reflective Teaching During a time of unprecedented challenges facing higher education the need for effective leadership for informal and formal leaders across the organization has never been more imperative Since publication of the first edition the environment for higher education has become more critical and complex Whether facing falling enrollments questions of economic sustainability the changing composition of the faculty and student bodies differential retention and graduation rates declining public confidence in the enterprise or the rise in the use of virtual technologies not to mention how COVID 19 and an intensified focus on long standing issues of racial and gender representation and equity have impacted institutions and challenged many long standing assumptions it is clear that learning on the job no longer suffices Leadership development in higher education has become essential for advancing institutional effectiveness which is the focus of this book Taking into account the imperative issues of diversity inclusion and belonging and the context of institutional mission and culture this book centers on developing capacities for designing and implementing plans strategies and structures connecting and engaging with colleagues and students and communicating and collaborating with external constituencies in order to shape decisions and policies It highlights the need to think broadly about the purposes of higher education and the dynamics of organizational excellence and to apply these insights effectively in goal setting planning and change leadership outcomes assessment addressing crises and continuous improvement at both the level of the individual and organization The concepts and tools in this book are equally valuable for faculty and staff leaders whether in formal leadership roles such as deans chairs or directors of institutes committees or task forces or those who perform informal leadership functions within their departments disciplines or institutions It can be used as a professional guide a textbook in graduate courses or as a resource in leadership training and development programs Each chapter concludes with a series of case studies and guiding questions

Leading from Within Nancy S. Huber, 1998 The premise is that we are all leaders When we care enough to want to create a better future in which to live and work then we are ready to lead Exploring the context of the passion which calls us to lead brings into focus our personal framework for leadership learning As we learn we discover develop and nourish the leader within This book links together the why the who and the what of leadership in a personalized but nonprescriptive format Reflective questions and journalling suggestions assist the reader in a journey that is unique for each individual and in each context Suggested resources and activities for learning leadership make this a useful tool in classroom or group settings as well as for an emerging leader The book does not advocate any single theory or approach but guides the reader to a personal understanding of leadership and its applications

Discovering the Leader in You Robert J. Lee, Sara N. King, 2010-10-26 This book is based on a simple obvious point leadership roles should be filled by people who deliberately decide they want to be in them Yet many executives and managers find that they have become leaders by default rather than as a result of a personal choice. In fact a great many people drift into or away from being leaders simply because they have not done the work of matching their own honestly described self with the realities of the leadership role. Not until they are well into their careers do many individuals seriously explore their personal fit for leadership. But by then it is often too late to prepare for more gratifying roles or to get out of situations that don't make sense for them as individuals. Discovering the Leader in You offers a planful approach to understanding how aspects of personality, character, vision, home life, values, and skills match with essential leadership activities. This unique system of self-discovery clearly shows what it looks like to fit or not to fit in leadership roles in organizations. Robert J. Lee and Sara N. King, who developed this approach from their experience at the widely renowned Center for Creative Leadership in Greensboro, North Carolina, help leaders and potential leaders examine leadership commitments and development paths in the context of who they are as individuals. They show how to connect the inner self to the demands of leadership by using a set of questions that help:

1. clarify the relevant realities and expectations in a leadership role
2. bring out a personal vision and a leadership vision
3. base leadership behaviors on personal values
4. become more authentic in leadership situations
5. productively integrate work and personal lives

Discovering the Leader in You will help all executives, seasoned veterans, and those considering leading as a new direction in their careers to gain more personal insight into what leadership really means to them, to retain more control over their career choices, and consequently to achieve more personal success as leaders. In the considerable literature on leadership, this book focuses on something new: how individuals can identify the key attributes of great leadership and link them to their own unique vision, values, and personal strengths. The authors provide a roadmap to self-knowledge that becomes a guide to maximizing effectiveness in the organization and in life.

Evelyn Rodstein, managing director, Leadership, Organizational Development, J.P. Morgan: "As we have known since biblical days, no one wants to follow an uncertain trumpet. If you want to be the most persuasive, self-confident, visionary leader that you can be, the tools and techniques in this book will help get you there."

Douglas T. Tim Hall, director, Executive Development Roundtable and professor of organizational behavior, Boston University School of Management: "The perfect book at the perfect time. As leadership has become the critical element in the age of intellectual capital, the pressure to assume a leadership role without reflection or regard for the trade-offs it represents is greater than ever. Thanks to Bob and Sara, mentors and professionals at all ages have a tool to make a conscious choice to accept the challenge and rewards of leadership."

Anita Jensen, vice president, organizational development, Bristol Myers Squibb: "You wouldn't think there was anything more that could be said about leadership, but there is: the most important part. In fact, how do you figure out who you are as a leader? Lee and King are wonderful counselors in answering this question. This book is going to be required reading in our executive MBA program."
