

Exploring Kites

Flying a kite may seem like simply a fun outdoor activity for a nice day. However, kites have been used for thousands of years for practical purposes. These purposes include fishing, long distance communication, photography, and more. The kite has inspired scientific inventions such as the lightning rod and the airplane. Kites have also been used to gather data about the weather or to see to spy on enemies. No matter the use, kites are an important part of the history of science, flight, and fun.

Kites typically have three main parts: first is the kite body. The kite body is the framework and outer covering or fabric. Examples of kite body types include diamond, bow, compound, delta, flat, parafoil, roller, and sail kites. Next, the control line allows the kite to be flown and controlled. Finally, the bridle connects the control line to the kite body. A bridle is built to make the kite reach the best angle to fly. The kite's structure will be different based on the purpose of the kite. Once the kite is built, understanding the forces of flight will get the kite into the air.

A kite is being pulled down towards the earth by gravity. A person flying a kite has to create enough lift to work against this force of weight, pulling the kite down. A kite flyer can use a crossing that is short from a higher altitude to get the kite high lift. As the kite goes higher into the air, the velocity of the wind increases. The velocity of air passing over the kite's body creates more lift. Next, the kite flyer uses the control line to guide the kite to a crossing altitude. Pulling on the control line generates more lift. More lift from these pulls allows the kite to climb higher. As the wind blows against the long, drag pulls the kite backward. However, the tension of the control line creates thrust that keeps the kite from going backward. Following these forces of flight keeps the kite crossing steadily.

Exploring Kites

Kites existed almost 3,000 years ago in China by philosophers, kite inventors and warriors. Early kites were made of natural materials of silk or paper. Bamboo made up the framework of the kite. The kite framework rectangular. Over time, kites became an important tool during military battles and used to measure distances before moving land and for communication. A kite could be flown to drop the message. The lightning also became a popular sport in China and is at the kite.

In 18th century, kites were used for fun in Europe and the United Kingdom began to use them for scientific experiments. Benjamin Franklin in 1752 to measure temperature differences at different heights. Benjamin Franklin and his son used a kite fitted with a wire line to study lightning. The kite is Franklin's invention of the General Insurance and later in understanding flight later. The invention is a machine that would allow people to fly. Brothers Orville and Wilbur and in the wings of a first kite. They were allowed the place in 1903, the Wright brothers completed the first successful powered flight.

One of the kite became really strong, kite air pressure in it variety, kite used to make (changed) flight, gradually and the most kite used today. It used for sailing, being playing and
