Exporting Services Arti Grover Goswami, Aaditya Mattoo, Sebastian Saez, 2012 The past two decades have seen exciting changes with developing countries emerging as exporters of services Technological developments now make it easier to trade services across borders But other avenues are being exploited tourists visit not just to sightsee but also to be treated and educated service providers move abroad under innovative new schemes and some developing countries defy traditional notions by investing abroad in services Exporting Services A Developing Country Perspective takes a brave approach combining exploratory econometric analysis with detailed case studies of representative countries Brazil Chile the Arab Republic of Egypt India Kenya Malaysia and the Philippines Two questions lead the analysis How did these developing countries succeed in exporting services What policy mix was successful and what strategies did not deliver the expected results The analysis evaluates the role of three sets of factors First the fundamentals which include a country's factor endowments infrastructure and institutional quality second policies affecting trade investment and labor mobility in services and third proactive policies in services designed to promote exports or investment The case studies illustrate the complex nature of reforms and policy making in the service sector as well as the benefits of well implemented reforms Although success seems to be explained by a set of conditions that are difficult to replicate common features can also be identified Several countries have adopted policies to support exports especially exports of information technology related services This resource will be valuable for policy makers experts and academics who are engaged in efforts to reform service and investment policies in their own country *Exporting Great Britain. exporting applicable to a wide range of service sectors      A League of Their Own N. Nergiz Dincer, Ayça Tekin-Koru, 2014

This paper sheds light on the intertwined nature of goods and services exports at the firm level In the literature services are considered as inputs in the production of goods rather than objects of trade in themselves However many firms produce and trade services with goods In this perspective this paper offers a systematic analysis of services exports in Turkey which constitutes a relevant developing country example by using rich firm level data for the period 2003-2008 Our results indicate that not only services firms but also manufacturing firms export services Firms exporting both goods and services are consistently bigger than firms exporting only goods or only services However goods exporting multinational firms in Turkey are larger than multinationals that export both goods and services Goods exporters with a larger size higher labor productivity and capital intensity are more likely to export services as well Furthermore having a wide spectrum of goods to export increases the odds in favor of becoming a services exporter      Exporting Essentials Laurel J.
